

U N L

What hidden strength,
Unless the strength of heav'n, if you mean that.
For sure I am, unless I win in arms;
To stand excluded from Emilia's charms;
Nor can my strength avail, unless by thee,
Endu'd with force, I gain the victory.
The commendation of adversaries is the greatest triumph of a writer, because it never comes unless extorted.
No poet ever sweetly sung,
Unless he were, like Phoebus, young;
Nor ever nymph inspir'd to rhyme,
Unless, like Venus, in her prime.
UNLESSONED, adj. Not taught.
The full fun of me
Is an unlesson'd girl, unchool'd, unpractis'd;
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn.
UNLETTERED, adj. Unlearned; untaught.
When the apostles of our Lord were ordained to alter the laws of heathenish religion, St. Paul excepted, the rest were unchooled and unlettered men.
Such as the jocund flute, or gamefome pipe
Stirs up among the loose, unletter'd hinds,
Who thank the gods amidst.
Th' unletter'd christian, who believes in grofs,
Plods on to heav'n, and ne'er is at a loss.
UNLEVELLED, adj. Not cut even.
All unlevel'd of the gay garden lies.
UNLIBIDINOUS, adj. Not lustful.
In those hearts
Love unlibidinous reign'd; nor jealousy
Was understood, the injur'd lover's hell.
UNLICENSED, adj. Having no regular permission.
Ask what boldness brought him hither Unlicensed.
Warn the thoughtless, self-confiding train,
No more, unlicensed, thus to brave the main.
UNLICKED, adj. Shapeless; not formed: from the opinion that the bear licks her young to shape.
Shape my legs of an unequal size,
To disproportion me in every part,
Like to a chaos, or unlick'd bear-whelp.
Those unlick'd bear-whelps.
The bloody bear, an independent beast,
Unlick'd to form, in groans her hate express'd.
UNLIGHTED, adj. Not kindled; not set on fire.
There lay a log unlighted on the earth:
For th' unborn chief the fatal sisters came,
And rais'd it up, and tosd it on the flame.
The sacred wood, which on the altar lays,
Untouch'd, unlighted glows.
UNLIGHTSOME, adj. Dark; gloomy; wanting light.
First the sun,
A mighty sphere! he fram'd, unlightsome first,
'T' hough of ethereal mould.
UNLIKE, adj.
1. Dissimilar; having no resemblance.
Where cases are to unlike as theirs and ours, I see not how that which they did, should induce, much less unlike us to the same practice.
So the twins humours, in our Terence, are Unlike; this harsh and rude, that smooth and fair.
Unlike the niceness of our modern dames;
Affected nymphs, with new affected names.
Our ideas, whilst we are awake, succeed one another, not much unlike the images in the inside of a lantern.
Some she disgrac'd, and some with honours crown'd;
Unlike successes equal merits found.
2. Improbable; unlikely; not likely.
Make not impossible that which but seems unlike.
What befel the empire of Almaine were not unlike to befal to Spain, if it should break.
UNLIKELIHOOD, n. [from unlikely.] Improbability.
UNLIKELINESS, n.
The work was carried on, amidst all the unlikelihooods and discouraging circumstances imaginable; the builders holding the sword in one hand, to defend the trowel working with the other.
There are degrees herein, from the very neighbourhood of demonstration, quite down to improbability and unlikeliness, even to the confines of impossibility.
UNLIKELY, adj.
1. Improbable; not such as can be reasonably expected.
Suspicion Mopia; for a very unlikely envy she hath stumbled upon.
2. Not promising any particular event.
My advice and actions both have met
Success in things unlikely.
This collection we thought not only unlikely to reach the future, but unworthy of the present age.
Effects are miraculous and strange, when they grow by unlikely means.

U N L

UNLIKELY, adv. Improbably.
The pleasures we are to enjoy in that conversation, not unlikely may proceed from the discoveries each shall communicate to another, of God and nature.
UNLIKENESS, n. f. Dissimilitude; want of resemblance.
Imitation pleases, because it affords matter for enquiring into the truth or fallhood of imitation, by comparing its likeness, or unlikeness with the original.
UNLIMITABLE, adj. Admitting no bounds.
He tells us 'tis unlimited and unlimited.
UNLIMITED, adj.
1. Having no bounds; having no limits.
So unlimited is our impotence to recompence or repay
God's dilection, that it fetters our very wishes.
It is some pleasure to a finite understanding, to view unlimited excellencies, which have no bounds, though it cannot comprehend them.
2. Undeined; not bounded by proper exceptions.
With grofs and popular capacities, nothing doth more prevail than unlimited generalities, because of their plainness at the first sight; nothing less, with men of exact judgment, because such rules are not safe to be trusted over far.
3. Unconfined; not restrained.
All the evils that can proceed from an untied tongue, and an unguarded, unlimited will, we put upon the accounts of drunkenness.
Ascribe not unto God such an unlimited exercise of mercy,
as may destroy his justice.
Husbands are countenanced not to trust too much to their wives owning the doctrine of unlimited conjugal fidelity.
UNLIMITEDLY, adv. Boundlessly; without bounds.
Many ascribe too unlimitedly to the force of a good meaning, to think that it is able to bear the stress of whatever commissions they shall lay upon it.
UNLIT, adj. Not coming in the order of succession.
They put a barren scepter in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlit hand,
No son of mine succeeding.
To UNLIT, v. a. To untwist; to open.
About his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself;
Who with her head, nimble in throats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly Seeing Orlando, it unlit itself.
UNLIT, adj. Unmelted; undissolved.
These huge, unwieldy lumps remained in the melted matter, rigid and unlit, floating in it like cakes of ice in a river.
To UNLIT, v. a.
1. To disburden; to exonerate.
Like an ass, whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unladen thee.
Vain man forbear, of cares unladen thy mind;
Forget thy hopes, and give thy fears to wind.
Some to unladen the fertile branches run.
2. To put off any thing burdensome.
To you duke Humphry must unladen his grief.
Nor can my tongue unladen my heart's great burthen.
To UNLIT, v. a.
1. To open what is shut with a lock.
I have seen her unlit her closet, take forth paper.
She springs a light,
Unlocks the door, and cutting out of breath,
The dying saw, and instruments of death.
2. To open in general.
My purges, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlocked to your occasions.
I had not thought to have unlocked my lips
In this unallow'd air, but that this jugler
Would think to charm my judgment, as mine eyes,
Obtruding false rules, pranc'd in reason's garb.
I yielded, and unlocked her all my heart,
Who with a grain of manhood well resolv'd,
Might easily have shook off all her snares.
Sand is an advantage to cold clays, in that it warms them,
and unlocks their binding qualities.
A luxurium of quick-lime unlocks the salts that are entangled in the viscid juices of some feebler persons.
Thy forests, Windlor! and thy green retreats Invite my lays. Be present, tylian maids!
Unlock your springs, and open all your fountains.
UNLOCKED, adj. Not fastened with a lock.
UNLOCKED, adj. Unexpected; not foreseen.
Yet perhaps had their number prevailed, if the king of Pontus had not come unlocked for to their succour.
How much unlocked for is this expedition!
God, I pray him
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlocked accident cut off.

U N L

Whatever is new is unlocked for; and ever it mends some,
and pares others.
From that high hope, to what relapse
Unlocked for are we fall'n.
Your affairs I have recommended to the king, but with unlocked success.
Nor fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
She comes unlocked for, if she comes at all.
UNLOCKABLE, adj. [A word rarely used.] Not to be looted.
Whatever may be said of the unlockable mobility of atoms, yet divers parts of matter may compose bodies, that need no other cement to unite them, than the juxta-position, and resting together of their parts, whereby the air, and other fluids that might dissipate them, are excluded.
To UNLOCK, v. a. To loose. A word perhaps barbarous and ungrammatical, the particle prefixed implying negation;
so that to unlock, is properly to bind.
York, unlocks your long imprison'd thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
The weak, wanton Cupid,
Shall from your neck unlocks his am'rous fold;
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shock to air.
Turn him to any cause of policy;
The gordian knot of it he will unlocks,
Familiar as his garter.
It rested in you.
'T' unlocks this tied-up justice, when you pleas'd.
The latchet of his shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unlocks.
He that should spend all his time in tying inextricable knots, only to baffle the industry of those that should attempt to unlocks them, would be thought not much to have served his generation.
To UNLOCK, v. n. To fall in pieces; to lose all union and connexion.
Without this virtue, the publick union must unlocks; the strength decay; and the pleasure grow faint.
UNLOVED, adj. Not loved.
As love does not always reflect itself, Zelmane, though reason there was to love Palladius, yet could not ever persuade her heart to yield with that pain to Palladius, as they feel,
that feel unloved love.
What though I be not fortunate;
But miserable most to love unloved!
He was generally unloved, as a proud and supercilious person.
UNLOVELINESS, n. f. Unamiableness; inability to create love.
The old man, growing only in age and affection, followed his suit with all means of unlovely servants, large promises, and each thing else that might help to countervail his own unloveliness.
UNLOVELY, adj. That cannot excite love. There seems by this word generally more intended than barely negation. See UNLOVELINESS.
UNLOVING, adj. Unkind; not fond.
Thou, blest with a goodly son,
Didst yield content to disinherit him;
Which argu'd thee a most unloving father.
UNLUCKY, adv. Unfortunately; by ill luck.
Things have fallen out to unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter.
An ant dropt unluckily into the water.
A fox unluckily crossing the road, drew off a considerable detachment.
UNLUCKY, adj.
1. Unfortunate; producing unhappiness. This word is generally used of accidents slightly vexatious.
You may make an experiment often, without meeting with any of those unlucky accidents which make such experiments misery.
2. Unhappy; miserable; subject to frequent misfortunes.
Then shall I you recount a rueful case,
Said he, the which with this unlucky eye
I late beheld.
3. Slightly mischievous; mischievously waggish.
His friendship is counterfeited, seldom to trust;
His doings unlucky, and ever unjust.
Why, cries an unlucky wags, a less bag might have served.
A lad, th' unlucky of his crew,
Was still contriving something bad, but new.
4. Ill-omen'd; inauspicious.
When I appear, see you avoid the place,
And haunt me not with that unlucky face.
UNLUSTRIOUS, adj. Wanting splendour; wanting lustre.
Should I join grapes with hands
Made hard with hourly fallhood, as with labour;
Then glad myself with peeping in an eye,
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow.

U N M

To UNLU, v. a. To separate vessels closed with chymical cement.
Our antimony thus handled, affordeth us an ounce of sulphur, of so sulphureous a smell, that upon the unluting the vessels, it infected the room with a scarce supportable stink.
UNMADE, adj.
1. Not yet formed; not created.
Thou wast begot in Demogorgon's hall;
And saw'st the secrets of the world unmade.
Then might'st thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
2. Deprived of form or qualities.
The first earth was perfectly unmade again, taken all to pieces, and framed a-new.
3. Omitted to be made.
You may the world of more defects upbraid,
That other works by nature are unmade;
That she did never at her own expence
A palace rear.
UNMAIMED, adj. Not deprived of any essential part.
An interpreter should give his author entire and unmaimed;
the diction and the verification only are his proper province.
UNMAKABLE, adj. Not possible to be made.
If the principles of bodies are unalterable, they are also unmakable by any but a divine power.
To UNMAKE, v. a. To deprive of former qualities before possessed. To deprive of form or being.
They've made themselves, and th'ir fancies now
Does unmake you.
God does not make or unmake things, to try experiments.
Empire! thou poor and despicable thing,
When such as these make, or unmake a king.
Bring this guide of the light within to the trial. God, when he makes the prophet, does not unmake the man.
To UNMAKE, v. a.
1. To deprive of the constituent qualities of a human being, as reason.
What, quite unmann'd in folly?
Gross errors unman, and strip them of the very principles of reason, and sober discourse.
2. To emasculate.
3. To break into irresolution; to deject.
Her clamours pierce the Trojans ears,
Unman their courage, and augment their fears.
Ulysses veil'd his pensive head;
Again unman'd, a shower of sorrows shed.
UNMANAGEABLE, adj.
1. Not manageable; not easily governed.
They'll judge every thing by models of their own, and thus are rendered unmanageable by any authority but that of absolute dominion.
None can be concluded unmanageable by the milder methods of government, till they have been thoroughly tried upon him; and if they will not prevail, we make no excuses for the obdurate.
2. Not easily wielded.
UNMANAGED, adj.
1. Not broken by horsemanship.
Like colts, or unmanaged horses, we start at dead bones and lifeless blocks.
2. Not tutored; not educated.
Savage princes flash out sometimes into an irregular greatness of thought, and betray, in their actions, an unguided force,
and unmanaged virtue.
UNMANLIKE, adj.
1. Unbecoming a human being.
It is strange to see the unmanlike cruelty of mankind, who, not content with their tyrannous ambition, to have brought the others virtuous patience under them, think their master-hood nothing, without doing injury to them.
Where the act is unmanly, or the expectation contradictory to the attributes of God, our hopes we ought never to enertain.
2. Unfitable to a man; effeminate.
By the greatness of the cry, it was the voice of man;
though it were a very unmanlike voice, so to cry.
New customs,
Though never so ridiculous,
Nays, let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd.
This is in thee a nature but affected;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune.
My servitude, ignoble,
Unmanly, ignominious, infamous.
Think not thy friend can ever feel the foot
Unmanly warmth, and tenderness of love.